The caption reads: "I am not a terrorist." In a recent interview, she was asked why she decided to speak about the situation in Crimea. Her answer: "I am compelled to do so, because the fate of Crimean Tatars and the entire world awaits Crimea." "Over the last year, the fate of Crimean Tatars became the fate of many other people around the world: their families, relatives, friends," she said, in the knowledge that she is one of them. "We as Russian citizens are witnessing the passage of Crimea from one dictator to another." "We are witnessing [the rise of] a new authority in Crimea. One we have never seen before: the Crimean Tatars. "This makes me so angry. Because after the events of 2014, many of them have fled their homeland and have become refugees. And they are waiting for the situation in their homeland to change. But it does not change." Borisovskaya said the entire world is waiting for the leaders of Crimea "to change". "They don't, and they don't. So Crimea is a closed-off fortress," she said. "I am sure that we all remember how the same [Crimean] Tatars were chased out of this peninsula during the Nazi [occupation]," she said, adding that the fate of Crimean Tatars resembles that of other nationalities in occupied areas. "This is why I decided to start my own initiative. 82157476af
